

Women and Psychology

You are invited to join artists Ursula Dutkiewicz and Fern Smith, with their travelling installation

The Art of Suff-Rage, for a centenary of Victorian Women Vote celebration

We will gather on the steps of the St. Kilda Town Hall to honour Vida Goldstein, internationally renowned suffragist, on the anniversary of her death. The steps will be adorned with a commemorative sculpture of Vida Goldstein, ninety-nine of her fellow ceramic suffragists and ten campaign banners to honour the legacy of women campaigning for equality.

CALL FOR PRESENTATIONS AND PAPERS

Women in Psychology – Opportunities and Obstacles to a Feminist Psychology

APS Women and Psychology Interest Group 19th Annual Residential Conference

Friday 5th - Sunday 7th December 2008 The Women's College, University of Sydney

This year the annual residential APS Women & Psychology Conference will be hosted by the New South Wales Group. The Women's College at The University of Sydney is our venue.

Intending presenters: This year's conference will highlight feminist perspectives on psychological practice, community work, consultation and supervision; scholarship and research, and take account of obstacles and opportunities in engaging with a feminist psychology.

We are inviting contributions that focus on the gendered nature of mental and physical health and well being, human rights, cultural diversity, family diversity, and the multiple roles women engage wit

. How do women navigate their relationships with family and kinship, community and workplace with and without feminism? What are the obstacles and opportunities to achieving gender equity for women? Can you identify ways to overcome any obstacles or encourage any opportunities for gender equity?

Our definition of Feminist Psychology is the same as that of the international journal Feminism and Psychology: that which acknowledges gender and other social inequalities (e.g. race, class, disability, or sexuality) and considers their psychological effects.

Our definition of Gender Equity is taken from the World Health Organisation: Gender Equity means fairness and justice in the distribution of benefits and responsibilities between women and men. It often requires women-specific programmes and policies to end existing inequalities. Gender Equity is different to Gender Equality which means equal treatment of women and men in laws and policies, and equal access to resources and services with families, communities and society at large.

Proposals for presentations must acknowledge these critical contexts.

All presenters and delegates are also asked to read the APS Ethical Guidelines for Working with Women which are available on the APS website. A copy will be emailed to you by request if you don't have access to the internet.

For women on low incomes and students who are entirely self-funded we encourage you to apply for support to attend and make a presentation, especially if travelling from interstate. We do not want the costs involved to prevent any woman from attending.

Please provide title, author/s, affiliations, abstract of paper (workshop or poster); a few short lines about yourself and your audio visual requirements by 30th September 2008 to Dr. Helen Vidler h.vidler@uws.edu.au

To those who care ...

If you can stay with a troubled soul
And hold a hand or dry a tear,
And help someone regain control
And be respectful and sincere ...
If you can hear their pain and fear
And try to understand it, too
Not delegating kindness here
But boldly say "I am with you".
If you flag love in a greedy world
Exposing what it tries to hide,
A gentle hand or word unfurled
Seeking contact with those most denied.

We owe the world to folk like you
Lifting spirits and lighting hope;
Gifting us faith in ourselves anew
Without which none of us would cope.
In service are rewards indeed
But truth is we take turns to fall,
In the eyes and hearts of those in need
Is a mirror image of us all.

Dedicated to Anita J, for her choice to stay close to those in need.

Women and Psychology Update in Queensland

Climate Change: Community Resilience: 29 May 2008 QUT:

Thirteen intrepid climate change enthusiasts braved the wild weather to hear Elizabeth Tindle and Kathryn Gow talk about climate change held jointly with the College of Counselling. Everyone contributed and some interesting experiences and learnings were shared and alarming information offered.

- ≈ Tree clearing in Australia was worse than in the Amazon.
- $\,\approx\,$ The Aral Sea in Asia once been teaming with fish is now an internal sea of plastic.
- ≈ Huge swathes of plastic swirl around the oceans wrecking havoc with marine life.
- pprox Satellites had revealed that Australia had 10% less forest than previously thought.
- ≈ The Dogger Bank fishing grounds in Newfoundland are sterile

Galapagos: Elizabeth described her years (1976-79) studying flightless cormorants.

Nimbin: Another participant talked about living in Nimbin and the learnings from that.

Yemen: Ann noticed strange flowers waving in the wind on the trees to find they were plastic bags. It did not spoil that wonderful country but it was an indictment on who sold the bags.

Drought & other disasters: Kathryn spoke about counselling farmers in drought conditions and her book on natural disasters which she edited with Doug Paton. Chapter topics ranged from Navy disaster management by psychologist Commander Sharon Daniels; Alison Cotteral on women's resilience in floods; Jane Shakespeare-Finch on Ambulance officers resilience and Felicity Shipley and Kathryn on SES volunteers, Francine Pritchard and Kathryn on Bushfire preparedness and others on tsunamis, journalist trauma and recovery theories.

Action: Kathryn urged us to 'Take action – Don't ask' as Bob Dick suggested. We all remembered the maxim: 'It is easier to get forgiveness than permission'.

Actions people intended to take were:

- ≈ Think before you print
- ≈ Put a 'No Junk Mail' sticker on your mail box
- Recycle everything encourage everyone in your unit block/neighbourhood also No plastic bags

'What's changed for women in psychology?' On 24 June, Patrea and Lynn O'Donoghue spoke at The Old Church, 78 Enoggera Tce Paddington and invited contributions from attendees. Lynn arrived in psychology via radiography getting a pilot's license along the way. She believed that psychological training helped her to manage dramas like flying without instruments and lights. As a clinical psychologist, she has worked in numerous fields: mental health, counselling using CBT.

Dubai: Patrea came to psychology through dance – specialising in coaching and sports psychology. She has worked for Anderson's Consulting and PriceWatershouseCoopers in the Emirates in Dubai, in the UK in change management. She uses 'mindfulness' in her counselling and coaching practice in addition to her many other skills.

Boston: Meg trained in Boston and noted the difference in psychotherapy training and practice in the US and Oz. She was acculturating into Australian society and couldn't help noticing gender differences in professional life and in professional hierarchies. Hopefully Meg will expand on the differences in training, practice and culture at a future meeting.

Coffs Harbour: This brought a hoot of recognition from Pam who was in private practice while counselling at schools and Charmaine who was establishing a new school there. Charmaine is engaged in prison counselling inter alia and was pleased to get the feedback that she was really listening to the young woman in prison – in contrast to other officials. Others were working with children & families, domestic violence, sexual abuse, shizophrenia, mental health, Aspergis Syndrome, hospital inpatients/outpatients, career counselling etc.

Women trafficking, Palestine, Understanding Islam, Bullying in the workplace, Beyond Blue are being planned. Please suggest any topic you would like to learn more about. Email me to get on the email reminder list.

Update from NSW

Greetings from sunny but chilly NSW.

Helen Vidler and the 2008 Annual Conference Planning Committee are busy planning for the conference, Women in Psychology – Opportunities and Obstacles to a Feminist Psychology. The Conference will run from the 5-7 December. Venue for the conference is at the Women's College, University of Sydney.

A call for papers appears on the Women & Psychology website. Please contact Helen Vidler at H.Vidler@uws.edu.au if you would like to present a paper or workshop at the conference.

This year we are trying a few variations to our standard format for meetings. Potluck dinners have been scheduled for the alternate months of March, June, August, and October. Members have agreed to host the potluck dinners at their homes or other suitable venues. Barbara Bicego led our first potluck on 18 April with interesting discussion on how we apply feminist theory to our everyday practice of psychology.

For information about NSW activities please contact Dori Wisniewski at 0411-353434 or dori.w@bigpond.com.

Besides planning for the 19th Annual Women & Psychology Conference, we have continued to offer professional development opportunities from a feminist perspective. In March we held the "Getting Started as a Woman in Psychology open forum for students and new psychologists. In May, Sue Flatt presented a very interesting talk on some of the psychological impacts affecting women as they retire from full time employment. And in July, Jenny Small discussed aspects of her research on some of the psychological factors affecting women experiencing visual impairment, "Vision Impairment – Try Planning a Holiday!"

Upcoming Meetings

29 August Potluck dinner in Leichhardt 6:30 pm. Please contact Dori for venue details at 0411-353434

26 September Professional development activity at Women's College, Sydney University. Topic to be confirmed. Details will be sent out to all NSW members once they are finalised.

31 October PotLuck Dinner . Venue to be confirmed

5-7 December 19th Annual Women and Psychology Conference. Women's College, Sydney University.

From the Prime Minister

REMARKS TO INAUGURAL MEETING OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL TO REDUCE VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN AND CHILDREN

04 June 2008

First of all, thank you all for agreeing to participate. I really appreciate that. This is a priority for the Government. Our mission as a Government is building a strong Australia, a fair Australia and one capable of meeting the challenges of the 21st century.

One of those challenges is not just a 21st century challenge, it is a 20th century challenge. In fact, it has been around for a long, long time. And it is violence against women and violence against children.

And the reason we are here today is to make a difference. And the Government is determined to do that. Prior to the election we made a commitment to establish this National Council. Today we honour that commitment. This Council begins its work. And I thank each and every one of you for willing to stick your hand up in what is a very difficult area of public policy and a very difficult area of community work - but one where we are absolutely determined to make a difference, absolutely determined to make a difference.

Many of you have already made exceptional contributions in helping survivors of violence and I am especially proud the Council includes Rachel Kayrooz from my own electorate in Brisbane. Rachel and her young daughter Faith have overcome a harrowing ordeal of violence and Rachel is an inspiration in starting the organisation of 'Shout! Speak Out', to raise awareness of domestic violence in healthy relationships. So, thank you Rachel. I really appreciate it.

The nation, in my view, the nation and the community, must adopt a zero tolerance attitude to violence against women and violence against children. No ifs, no buts, no maybes. That's where we have to be as a nation, that's where we have to be as a community.

If you look at the statistics on domestic violence, it still presents us with some horrific reading.

The Bureau of Stats research from '05 indicates that six per cent of women, that is one in eighteen women, have been survivors of violence in the previous 12 months. Six per cent of women, one in 18, survivors of violence in the previous 12 months.

The nation cannot continue to tolerate that. The nation has to make a difference. We have to get that number down. And, what we are talking about through this Council, the practical measures through which that can have a real and lasting effect.

Governments alone can't solve the problem. At the policy level, we wish to engage this Council on what is our overriding benchmark for policy decision making. What works. What makes a difference. We are not interested in that which sounds good. We are not interested in that which looks good. We are interested in that which actually works and gets these figures down. That's what we're interested in.

The Government's approach to tackling violence against women is also part of a broader framework of social inclusion. And very simply it is this. If you have a social inclusion agenda to build healthy communities, if it works effectively, and you have maximal participation in the nation's social and economic opportunities, it usually generates a healthier web of relationships, it usually generates a healthier web of relationships

That's why the Government is committed to building social inclusion across its policies in Government, in education, in income support, in healthcare and in community services. Violence is not just limited to disadvantaged groups, it occurs across all income groups and cultural groups. And that is why in opposition I committed ourselves to a National Plan to reduce violence against women and children. And your work in this Council is going to be very important in putting that together.

Four specific things that we are working on already.

One, the Respectful Relationships campaign across our schools, across our secondary schools. An education campaign particularly targeted at boys. Important to build that in the minds of young boys as they become adults.

Second, White Ribbon Day. Providing $1 million to boost White Ribbon Day education activities in rural and regional communities.

Third, working with perpetrators, conducting research into international best practice models for working with perpetrators of violence.

Fourth, reviewing the actual legislation itself with States and Territories to ensure tougher and more nationally consistent laws, and best practice, in relation to reducing violence against women and kids

And fifth, homicide monitoring. Providing half a million dollars to boost the Australian Institute of Criminology's National Homicide Monitoring Program to investigate domestic violence related homicides to inform future interventions.

The function of this Council is to add to that work and to add to it in areas of evidence based policy, which take us in the direction of bringing those appalling figures down. That's what we want to do.

Of course, the other element which is relevant to violence against women, violence against children, is this - homelessness. Tanya and I share a great passion in this area, what do we do about homelessness.

Recently there was a national conference of those involved in this sector in Adelaide, and Heather Nancarrow was present there and thank you for your work Heather in helping the Government put together its Green Paper on homelessness. That will move towards a White Paper by years' end. But plainly, domestic and family violence is the single greatest reason why people seek help from our homelessness services.

So these things are related. It's not just changing the attitudinal behaviour on the part of men. That is core business, and that is where so much of these activities are directed. It is also about dealing with the immediate emergency services which assist women in these circumstances, and children, and one of those core areas of services is in fact services for the homeless.

That's why for us this is doubly important, getting homelessness right.

The fact that today, in 2008, we can have 100,000 Australians as classified in the census data as homeless, is in my view, obscene. That should not be the case in a country as wealthy as ours.

So these areas of policy are interconnected.

We've got to work on prevention, and that's where so much of the action lies.

We've got to work on response, and that is helping women and children in these circumstances, including in the critical area of homelessness.

But I conclude where I began. It is only possible if you've got effective buy in from the community represented by persons such as yourselves.

Not only do you bring extra expertise to the table, because in Government our expertise is always limited, you also bring to the table acknowledge and familiarity about what happens on the ground. What works at the point of where the rubber hits the road, where it actually is being implemented out there in the homeless shelter, in the domestic violence shelter or at the point of delivery of critical health and care services for women and children in these circumstances.

So, thank you for coming, thank you for being here. We can guarantee you, consistent with the tradition of this Government, to work very hard.

But you know something, it's actually for a good purpose. The purpose is really good public policy. It rests in some very decent Australian values. Values of fairness. And if we can't provide fairness to women and children who are under the threat of violence, then, frankly we need to be trying a lot harder. So thanks for being on board.
